B. Accomplishments:

The propaganda effort has succeeded in producing considerable external attention to the Chilean situation. We are not yet sure, however, of the impact these efforts are having inside Chile. Greater effort is being made in fine tuning the propaganda to achieve a more specific impact.

C. Situation:

Both the PN and the PDC have met formally with Allende and his representatives to negotiate acceptable conditions for participating in a coalition government. The PN distrusts the PDC, and the PDC is going through the motions. Having lost any hope of defeating Allende in the parliamentary run-off, and Frei being unwilling to take steps to provoke a military solution, there is an increasing mood of inevitability about Allende's selection.
